NEW QUESTION: 4

DevOps, a combination of development and operations, is a practice that emphasizes collaboration and communication between developers and operations. It involves automating the software development process and using cloud services to manage infrastructure. DevOps aims to reduce the time and cost of releasing new software and to improve the quality of the software. Key components of DevOps include continuous integration and continuous deployment (CI/CD), infrastructure as code (IaC), and monitoring and logging. DevOps is a cultural shift that requires a change in mindset and a focus on automation and collaboration.
