NEW QUESTION: 1

A company would like to implement a serverless application by using Amazon API Gateway, AWS Lambda and Amazon DynamoDB. They deployed a proof of concept and stated that the average response time is greater than what their upstream services can accept Amazon CloudWatch metrics did not indicate any issues with DynamoDB but showed that some Lambda functions were hitting their timeout.

Which of the following actions should the Solutions Architect consider to improve performance?

(Choose two.)

- A. Configure the AWS Lambda function to reuse containers to avoid unnecessary startup time.
- B. Enable API cache on the appropriate stage in Amazon API Gateway, and override the TTL for individual methods that require a lower TTL than the entire stage.
- C. Create an Amazon ElastiCache cluster running Memcached, and configure the Lambda function for VPC integration with access to the Amazon ElastiCache cluster.
- D. Increase the amount of memory and adjust the timeout on the Lambda function. Complete performance testing to identify the ideal memory and timeout configuration for the Lambda function.

Answer: B,D

Explanation:

A: While this will improve the situation, it may not be enough.

B: Memory - The amount of memory available to the function during execution. Choose an amount between 128 MB and 3,008 MB in 64 MB increments. Lambda allocates CPU power linearly in proportion to the amount of memory configured. At 1,792 MB, a function has the equivalent of 1 full vCPU (one vCPU-second of credits per second).

All calls made to AWS Lambda must complete execution within 900 seconds. The default timeout is 3 seconds, but you can set the timeout to any value between 1 and 900 seconds.

C: The problem is not with the DB.

D: AWS API Gateway has a max timeout of 29 seconds for all integration types, which includes Lambda as well. It means that any API call coming through API Gateway cannot exceed 29 seconds. It makes sense for most of the APIs except for few high computational ones.

E: Increase the memory not CPU.
